WJS WASSERMAN, JURISTA & STOLZ
A PROFESSIONAL CORPORATION
ATTORNEYS AT LAW

Bankruptcy has been a specialty at Wasserman, Jurista & Stolz, P.C., for half a century. But the law firm's attorneys spend most of their time looking for alternatives on behalf of their clients.

"We have always seen bankruptcy as a last resort, to be filed at the 11th hour, at the 59th minute, at the 59th second, and only when all other avenues have been explored and exhausted," says Robert B. Wasserman, the firm's managing partner.

The "Great Recession" has kept the firm busy, of course, as corporate and individual bankruptcies soar. Over the last two years, the firm has been actively advising businesses and individuals in an effort to protect their assets from creditors, maximize distribution and repayment of debt to creditors, firm up balance sheets and turn around debtors' financial affairs, whether or not the process winds up in court. The firm also regularly advises landlords, all types of creditors and bankruptcy trustees on how to maximize recoveries in insolvency cases.

The obstacles to reorganizing a business have grown steeper, due to tight credit markets, the difficulty of raising money and the scarcity of buyers willing to purchase assets. But Wasserman, Jurista, & Stolz brings a wealth of knowledge and expertise to the challenge.

The firm's attorneys have more than 150 years of combined experience practicing law in the bankruptcy and insolvency arenas. Because they understand the economic realities faced by their clients, they take pride in providing cost-effective, efficient, results-oriented representation at reasonable and fair rates.

"Businesses have financial problems even during economic boom times, and regardless of the economic environment around us, our firm has been sought out for the quality of our service and the skill of our attorneys," Wasserman says. "Yet, we anticipate that the uncertain economic climate today will be keeping us busy for the near future and beyond."

Founded in 1960, Wasserman, Jurista & Stolz focuses on representing debtors, creditors, trustees, landlords and banks and seeks to protect their rights in bankruptcy filings, receiverships, state court insolvency proceedings and out-of-court workouts.

As a boutique firm practicing in a specialized area of law, the attorneys of Wasserman, Jurista & Stolz can move quickly and responsively no matter the situation. The firm does not overstaff cases and keeps its overhead low, ensuring high-quality legal representation is efficiently and economically available to clients of all sizes in all cases.

"The size and structure of our firm, combined with the wide range of experience that we have in virtually every industry imaginable, allows us to handle large and complex cases while maintaining the responsiveness that every client deserves," Wasserman says. "No case is too large or too small. Our focus allows us to be particularly responsive to the needs of debtors, creditors and parties involved in all kinds of insolvency cases."

On the charitable front, Wasserman, Jurista & Stolz is active in the New Jersey Bankruptcy Law Foundation, whose philanthropic activities include contributions to the Community Food Bank of New Jersey and the Opportunity Project. The firm also takes part in the New Jersey Legal Services Pro Bono Foreclosure Defense Initiative and does a significant amount of pro bono work for the poor. ■
